and friends as curator David Van Zanten guides us on this unique opportunity to view this exhibition that explores the dialogue between architects and city planners in the United States, Europe, and Australia through drawings, large-scale architectural renderings, sketches, and rare books.

Drawing the Future focuses on a few key competitions and exhibitions and their primary participants, including architects Daniel Burnham, Marion Mahony Griffin, Walter Burley Griffin, and Frank Lloyd Wright. The designs, drawings, plans and publications convey the international optimism about creating a city of the future, especially in the years before World War I.
